Texas Civil Rights Project

The Prisoners' Rights Program works to improve conditions in Texas prisons and jails through litigation and advocacy. TCRP only has the resources to represent less than one percent of the hundreds of prisoners who contact us each year for help. The Prisoners' Rights Program concentrates on cases that will have broad impact by changing a policy or creating other systemic relief. In most cases, before TCRP can provide a prisoner legal assistance, the prisoner must use the grievance process for the facility they are incarcerated in to comply with the Prison Litigation Reform Act. Though many grievance systems are ineffective, an inmate must at least try to resolve a problem through the grievance process in most cases before legal action can be taken. Before contacting TCRP, make sure to submit grievances that comply with the prison or jail's policies, and file any required appeals.
